CONGRÈS ET ASSEMBLÉE GÉNÉRALE ANNUELLE DE LA SCÉC 2016

11–13 MAI 2016

CAC CONFERENCE AND ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

MAY 11–13, 2016

ANNONCE PRÉLIMINAIRE / PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT

From Patrick Baker

(English text follows)

Tous les ans, la Société canadienne des études classiques organise un congrès d'envergure, réunissant autour de quelques 130 communications 150 à 220 participants de la communauté scientifique œuvrant dans le domaine des études anciennes et classiques. Pour la quatrième fois, l'Université Laval a l'honneur de recevoir ce congrès qui aura lieu du 11 au 13 mai, dans les locaux du Séminaire de Québec et des Laboratoires d'archéologie de l'Université laval, dans le Vieux Québec.

La Conférence spéciale sera prononcée le deuxième jour, le 12 mai, dans la Salle des Promotions du Séminaire. L'orateur, M. François de Polignac, Directeur d'études et Doyen de la section des sciences religieuses (5e sect.) de l'École Pratiques des Hautes Études, présentera une conférence intitulée : « Cité et religion en Grèce ancienne : un état de la question ». Une réception suivra. Dans la même salle, le premier jour du congrès (11 mai), les congressistes seront invités en soirée à une dégustation de vins et fromages. Le dernier soir, après l'Assemblée générale annuelle de la Société, aura lieu le traditionnel banquet au restaurant Le Parlementaire, situé dans des locaux historiques à l'intérieur même de l'Assemblée nationale du Québec.

Tout ce qui concerne les informations relatives au congrès, ainsi que l'inscription et la soumission de communication seront bientôt en ligne sur le site bilingue du congrès. L'annonce en sera faite ici même dans le BCÉA.

Notez bien que la date limite pour soumettre une communication sera le 15 janvier 2016.

Au plaisir de vous accueillir bientôt dans la magnifique ville de Québec!

Every year, the Classical Association of Canada holds an academic conference with presentations of approximately 130 papers. The overall attendance ranges between 150 and 220, consisting of individuals doing research over a broad range of subjects in Classical Studies. For the fourth time in the history of the Association Laval University has the honour of hosting this conference, from May 11th to 13th 2016 at the Séminaire de Québec and the Laboratoires d'archéologie de l'Université Laval, in the Old Town of Quebec City.

The guest lecture will be held on May 12th in the Salle des promotions of the Seminary. The guest-speaker will be Prof. François de Polignac, Research Director and Dean at the 5th section (Sciences religieuses) of the École pratique des hautes études (Paris). The title of his presentation will be: « Cité et religion en Grèce ancienne : un état de la question ». A cocktail reception will follow. The first day (May 11th), participants are invited to an evening Wine & Cheese « dégustation » in the same room, the penthouse of one wing of the Seminary. On the last evening, after the Annual General Meeting of the Association will take place the traditional banquet at the restaurant Le Parlementaire located inside the Parliament Building, home of Québec's National Assembly.

General information concerning the conference as well as details about registration and the submission of abstracts will soon be available online on the conference's bilingual website. Members will be informed of the launch through the CCB

Please note that the deadline for submitting an abstract is January 15th 2016.

We hope to see you soon in magnificent Quebec City!

CALL FOR PAPERS: WOMEN'S NETWORK PANEL AT THE CAC CONFERENCE, MAY 11–13, 2016"WOMEN IN CONFLICT IN ANCIENT GREECE AND ROME"*APPEL À COMMUNICATIONS: SÉANCE DU RÉSEAU DES FEMMES AU CONGRÈS ANNUEL DE LA SCÉC, 11–13*mai 2016*« LES FEMMES DANS LES CONFLITS EN GRÈCE ET À ROME »

From Lisa Trent

(Le français suit)

The Women's Network of the CAC invites submissions for this year's panel, themed "Women in Conflict in Ancient Greece and Rome." Submissions may include, but are not limited to, explorations of women as victims of violence and conflict and as actors or agents of violence and conflict; conflict physical or psychological, real or fictional; and conflict as represented in Greco-Roman art, literature, historiography, or rhetoric. We warmly encourage all scholars and graduate students who are interested in the topic to apply.

The Women's Network of the CAC supports women's scholarship in Classical Studies, women's professional activities in the discipline, and all scholars and graduate students with research and teaching interests in gender and sexuality in the ancient world. The only requirement for participation is membership in the CAC.

Please submit abstracts of 350-500 words (with relevant bibliography) by Friday, January 15th, 2016 directly to Kathy Simonsen (kathryns@mun.ca) and indicate that the abstract is for the Women's Network/Réseau des Femmes. Further enquiries can be directed to Kathy Simonsen (kathryns@mun.ca) or Allison Surtees (a.surtees@uwinnipeg.ca).

Le Réseau des Femmes de la SCÉC lance un appel à contributions pour la séance de cette année qui portera sur le thème: "Les femmes dans les conflits en Grèce et à Rome". Nous invitons les recherches qui explorent (mais ne sont pas limités à) la position des femmes en tant que victimes de violence et de conflit ou comme agents de violence ou de conflit — conflit physique ou psychologique, réel ou fictif; et conflit représenté dans l'art, littérature, l'historiographie, ou la rhétorique gréco-romaine. Nous encourageons vivement tous les chercheurs et étudiantes qui sont intéressé(e)s par le sujet à soumettre une proposition. La seule condition de participation est l'adhésion à la SCÉC.

Le Réseau des Femmes de la SCÉC a été créé par un groupe de femmes avec l'objectif d'appuyer les femmes désirant poursuivre une carrière en études classiques, et plus généralement pour supporter tous les chercheurs et étudiant(e)s aux cycles supérieurs intéressés à la recherche sur le genre et la sexualité dans le monde ancien.

Faire parvenir votre résumé de 350-500 mots (accompagné d'une bibliographie) à Kathy Simonsen (kathryns@mun.ca), au plus tard le vendredi 15 janvier 2016. Pour tout complément d'information ou questions nous vous prions de contacter Kathy Simonsen (kathryns@mun.ca) ou Allison Surtees (a.surtees@uwinnipeg.ca).

AMERICAN SCHOOL OF CLASSICAL STUDIES AT ATHENS DIRECTOR OF THE SCHOOL (REMINDER)

From Mary Darlington

The American School of Classical Studies at Athens seeks a distinguished scholar and experienced administrator having close familiarity with the School for the position of Director of the School. The Director works with the School's Managing Committee and Trustees in developing and implementing the academic and fiscal policy of the School and reports to the Managing Committee through its Chair. The Director leads the School's mission in Greece and oversees the School's activities, including its academic program, excavations, and other research. The Director is expected to participate actively in the design of academic programs and the instruction of students at the School. All department heads, including those of the Blegen and Gennadius libraries, the Archives, the Athenian Agora and Ancient Corinth excavations, and the Wiener Laboratory, report to the Director. The Director also oversees relations between the School and the host country, especially with the Hellenic Ministry of Culture and Sports, and is active in seeking funding opportunities for the School in Greece and in the E.U. Good command of Modern Greek is essential. Candidates must demonstrate strong qualities of leadership and articulate clearly their vision for the future of the School.

The term is flexible, two to five years. It begins on July 1, 2017, and is renewable. Salary and benefits commensurate with rank and experience, housing in the Director's residence, travel and entertainment budgets provided. The incumbent is not seeking a second term.

The deadline for applications and all supporting materials is December 1, 2015. Candidates should apply online, uploading a curriculum vitae and a statement explaining their interest in the position and their vision for it (max. 750 words), at:

<https://ascsa.wufoo.com/forms/director-of-the-school-application>.

Candidates should ask three people familiar with their work to send a letter of support as a Word or PDF file to application@ascsa.org or mail a hard copy to Professor Peter Krentz, Chair, Committee on Personnel, American School of Classical Studies at Athens, 6-8 Charlton Street, Princeton, NJ 08540-5232.

CFP: PORTALS, GATES: THE CLASSICS IN MODERNIST TRANSLATION

From Lynn Kozak

As Steven Yao observes in Translation and the Languages of Modernism, both the practice and the idea of translation were integral to experimental early twentieth-century modernist work in English: "feats of translation not only accompanied and helped to give rise to, but sometimes even themselves constituted, some of the most significant Modernist literary achievements in English." And in their translation work, many anglophone modernists were especially responsive to the literatures of Ancient Greece and Rome. As H.D. would say of Euripides, whose plays she translated, "these words are to me portals, gates."

Modernists Ezra Pound, H.D., W.B. Yeats and E.E. Cummings—among others—pursued translations of work from dramatists and poets such as Aeschylus, Euripides, Sophocles, Homer, Sappho, Meleager, Theocritus, Catullus, Horace, Ovid, and Propertius. In some cases they developed more traditional translations, aimed to render in English a text from another language, culture, and time; in other instances, they ventured into more maverick translations, often construed by contemporary reception studies as adaptations or interventions (which sometimes incurred the ire of early twentieth-century scholarship). For many modernists, such translation work not only served as "good training"—as Pound phrased it—but also contributed to the enrichment of English beyond its ordinary boundaries, allowing fine-grained and radical access to the aesthetic and intellectual wisdom of a corpus of ancient literature they saw as valuable to the present. Many even used the concept of translation to capture a broader modernist commitment to 'bringing over' to the early twentieth century resources of the ancient past, its cultural archive—to speak to questions, conceptual nodes and problematics of the contemporary moment.

Situated at the intersection of Classical studies, Modernist studies, and Translation studies, this conference invites commentary on the work of early twentieth-century modernist "translation," broadly interpreted – responses by modernist writers to texts and cultural materials from the Classical world. We welcome papers, performances, and creative or multimedia work addressing

1. more traditional translation work, such as work for the Poets' Translation Series edited by Richard Aldington, Yeats's King Oedipus and Oedipus at Colonus, and Louis MacNeice's Agamemnon;
2. more experimental translation work by modernists such as Pound (e.g. Homage to Sextus Propertius, Women of Trachis) and H.D. (e.g. Hippolytus Temporizes, Ion);
3. freer appropriations and adaptations of Classical material, such as H.D.'s responses to Sappho and Meleager; Pound's and Joyce's engagements with the Odyssey; Pound's and H.D.'s work with the Eleusinian mysteries; and Cummings's experiments with Catullus, Homer, and Greek myth.

Please send 250-word abstracts, along with current cv, to miranda.hickman@mcgill.ca and lynn.kozak@mcgill.ca by January 10, 2016. The conference will take place at McGill University in Montréal, Québec, Canada, April 30 and May 1, 2016.

CFP: EXPERIENCING WARFARE IN THE ANCIENT WORLD STUDENT CONFERENCE
CLASSICS GRADUATE PROGRAM — BROCK UNIVERSITY
FEBRUARY 6, 2016

From Stephanie Culp

The Classics Graduate Program at Brock University is pleased to announce an interdisciplinary conference exploring the experience of warfare in the ancient world. How were the ancients affected by warfare? What can the literature and material remains they left behind tell us of the changes that war brought to these civilizations? Topics on the subject can include but are not limited to:

- Weapons and Technology
- Warfare in Literature

- Women in Warfare
- Representing Warfare in Archaeology
- Creating Military Monuments in the Ancient World
- Social Organization of Military Systems
- Military and the Political Sphere

This year's keynote speaker is Peter Meineck, a Clinical Professor of Classics at NYU. Dr. Meineck is the founder and former artistic director of the Aquila Theatre and recently co-edited a collection entitled Combat Trauma and the Ancient Greeks.

Scholars from the fields of Classics, Archeology, Near Eastern Studies, History, Anthropology, English, Contemporary Film Studies, Art History, Philosophy and Psychology are welcome to submit abstracts for consideration as well as any other academic disciplines that touch on this subject. Proposals for 15–20 minute paper presentations should include the presenter's name, e-mail address, tentative title, a 200-word abstract, a short (150-word) bio, as well as an indication of whether any computing or electronic equipment (e.g., laptop, projector) will be needed. Please submit proposals by December 15, 2015 to brockclassconf2016@gmail.com.
